

SEE HARM DONE BY BARREN LAND

Experts Say Reforestation
Will Help in Flood Control.

Washington.—Any plan for flood control which does not include a comprehensive reforestation program as one of its important phases cannot be successful, in the opinion of federal and civilian forestry experts. None of the experts assert that reforestation of itself, will prevent floods, but all of them agree that forested areas are of incalculable value in halting run-off and loss of millions of dollars annually by erosion.

The importance of a definite national reforestation policy and the development of closely related state programs was emphasized, according to Charles Lathrop Pack, president of the American Tree association, by the recent Mississippi river flood which he describes as "one of the most gigantic defeats engineering science has ever suffered."

Three-Part Solution.
The flood control, as viewed by Mr. Pack, calls for a three-part solution: 1. Restoration to forest conditions of all those portions of land suited for practical forest growing that are today destructively and wastefully washing away through lack of trees. 2. The application of the very best engineering technique available for the building of levees, storage dams, spillways, or, if need be, a combination of all these. 3. Correction and regulation of the destructive grazing which causes millions of acres east of the Rocky mountains to erode and flow away.

"The Mississippi has brought to us an obligation for action that must be squarely and immediately met," asserted Mr. Pack in a recent brochure on the subject of "Floods, Forests and the Future," which included a history of the adoption of a reforestation program as flood prevention measures in France, Italy, Switzerland and other European countries.

In his contribution to Mr. Pack's booklet, W. B. Greeley, chief of the United States forest service, declared:

"Every forest fire in the Mississippi basin tends, sooner or later, to augment flood conditions. Every abandoned or neglected piece of poor hillside farm land has the same tendency. Destructive lumbering and overgrazing, which leave naked soil behind them, are sure to contribute, at one time or another, to some flood crest."

"Behind and supplementing the levees or other structures that must be built, we get back to the land. And we should not fail to restore, as far as it may be done, the natural storage and protection from erosion that may be derived from common sense and practical wisdom in our everyday use of land."

For forty years or more, according to Mr. Pack, the United States has put its faith and money into levee construction as a flood prevention measure, but almost over night, he continued, "a great river rising in its angry wrath has broken our man-made levees as a summer's shower carries away the mud toys of a little child."

Leaves Alone Not Enough.
"Probably," he continued, "we shall have to devote many millions more to this form of river development, but it is folly longer to depend for flood protection on levees alone."

"The problem of the Mississippi is far too huge and too inextricably born in with our national welfare to approach from anything less than a national viewpoint. It is a problem to whom solution we must bring not only the best engineering skill, but also the best knowledge and scientific attainment in the fields of forestry, range control and soils management. We have got to formulate a vast, thoroughly correlated scheme wherein the engineer, the forester, and other experts shall give their best toward devising effective means of taming once for all the turbulent Father of Waters.

A wealth of forest facts exists pointing to the moderating action of forests on floods and to the deterring effect on erosion. And, after all, it is erosion that furnishes arms and ammunition to flood waters. Not water, but silt matter, is the destructive stuff that floods are made of.

Appalachians Need Trees.

"A large percentage of the water that flows past New Orleans comes from the combined sources of the Ohio, Tennessee and Cumberland rivers. These three rivers are the chief flood breeders of the Mississippi. All arise among the steep slopes and heavy soils of the Appalachians."

"From this area enormous quantities of silt are torn annually to add to the volume and destructiveness of the lower river in flood stages. More, if anywhere, is the region where land should be acquired and put under forest management by the federal government and by the states. In this section more than any other, forests can make their greatest contribution as ameliorating factors in flood control. Yet the rate at which land for this purpose is being purchased there is pitifully incommensurate with the need."

"At the northern headwaters of the Mississippi the topography is gentle, and the soil more sandy or gravelly. Little silt occurs there and except for a few

However, the headwaters of the Mississippi river, with literally incalculable lakes and forested swamps, are the great natural reservoir of this river. Indiscriminate drainage of the swamps and areas of lakes and the destruction of the forests around the lakes tend to destroy this natural reservoir.

Need Range Control.

"The northern portions of Minnesota and Wisconsin are but little suitable for agriculture. Here, if the land is protected from fire, nature will keep the source of the Mississippi clothed with forest vegetation. Therefore, fire protection of the forests on the headwaters of the river is essential, both as a measure of flood control and as an economic necessity. From the western tributaries the lands just east of the Rockies are undergoing a tremendous process of erosion as the result of unrestricted sheep grazing. For this country the solution lies largely in a national system of range control until forage plants again cover the land and hold the soil in place."

"So it is in the Appalachians, and to a somewhat less extent in the Ozarks, that forestry can best contribute its share toward the control of the Mississippi. Today probably less than 2 per cent of these regions receives any form of forest management."

Federal Ownership.
"Federal ownership and state ownership is the immediate solution, the first step towards translating these vast assets, these potential forces of destruction, into acres of perpetual productivity."

"It is important, too, that we remember the money so spent must not be looked on in the same light as money spent for levees or spillways—funds purely and simply spent in flood control and bringing no other return than protection. Even so, it would be worth every cent."

state, are themselves capable of important monetary returns. As the years pass they should pay back every penny expended. They will furnish perpetually renewable sources of wealth to coming generations. And all this they can do while they are fulfilling their great primary purpose of holding the soil in place, reducing erosion and mitigating the destructive effects of floods."

Mother of Gen. Lee

Once Entombed Alive

Washington.—Gen. Robert E. Lee, military hero and the leader of the South, was born 35 months after his mother had been laid to rest in her casket in the family vault on Arlington Heights.

In 1860 four physicians about her bedside pronounced her dead. She lay in state in the great Lee mansion on Arlington Heights for four days. On the sixth day she was removed to the family mausoleum.

On the seventh day the sexton went into the mausoleum to lay flowers on the casket and sweep the floor.

While sweeping, the old sexton heard a faint, far-off sounding voice call, "Help, help, help." The sexton was without the wall of the mausoleum. Arguing to himself the voice had been entirely his imagination he finally took courage and returned to his sweeping. Again he heard that weak, far-off voice.

He was standing directly over the glass of the lid and looking into the face of the supposedly dead woman he saw her lips quiver. The lid was hurriedly removed by him before he summoned assistance. Mrs. Lee soon recovered. Fifteen months after the incident Robert Edward Lee was born.

The difference in a haberdashery and a grocery is one is an outfitter and the other is an infitter.

Fugitive Orphans Captured in Boat

William Jamieson and Andrew Georgezides, 8 and 12 years of age respectively, who escaped from the Leake Watts Orphanage at Toledo two days ago, are being held by Sheriff Arthur Rice awaiting the arrival of officials from the institution. The boys were brought to the court house this morning by Andrew Blase of Flathead, who claimed the two stole his boat while he was hunting along the shore of the Hudson river. When returned to the place where he had tied the boat, it was missing and a search revealed the craft containing the boys sailing near Rhinebeck.

Charming Fall Coat of Short Lamb's Wool Dyed

A prominent motion picture actress says the stripes in this coat of short lamb's wool, dyed, accentuate the slenderness. The collar is of silver fox.

Decided Contrast Noted in Millinery for Fall

The new fall hats present a decided contrast to the shapes of early spring and summer. In the first place, the models for autumn street wear, even the hats designed to accompany the strictly tailored outfit, feature some form of decorative trimming. No longer is the unadorned felt shape the sole voice of well-dressed women, the new models, without exception, revealing a striking use of ornamental detail. This insistence on trimming, together with the novel fabrics featured by several prominent designers, comprise the outstanding notes in the new millinery.

The second highlight in the autumn hat mode is the variety of shapes offered. In place of the ubiquitous cloche which so long dominated millinery fashions both here and abroad, we find at least four shapes sponsored by leading designers and accepted by smart women on both sides of the Atlantic. This awakening to the decorative possibilities of novel, contrasting trimmings and variety in the matter of contour is still another phase of the elegance and sophistication current throughout the mode.

For tailored street clothes the smart shapes are a modified cloche and a hat with a brim that folds back on the crown in cuff effect and slit in a Y-shaped opening over one eye. The more tailored shape of the two is the former which differs from the cloche of previous seasons in the cut of both its crown and brim. The crown is lower than the crown we have been wearing and is frequently molded to the head without any of the creases and draping that have so long characterized this type of hat. Then the brim is a bit wider than the customary cloche brim. It invariably turns down and occasionally ripples slightly at the sides.

While almost all hat shapes are becoming to the young face, past seasons have sometimes found the matron wondering if she had been overlooked by the milliners altogether. This season, however, she will have no such difficulty, as tiny or medium brims and effects that shade the face just enough to take away that trying look of severity that the older women find so trying are legion.

See Bell Sleeve Again; Flares Found on Coats

Afternoon dresses show an increasing tendency toward wide flaring bell sleeves. Some of them approximate kimono width and include in ribbon trimmings of elaborate pattern.

Few important Paris dressmakers use the extreme bell sleeve but many of them show mildly flared effects, sometimes lined with contrasting colors.

More flared sleeves are shown in coats than dresses at the large dress-making houses. They insert fullness into sleeves below the elbow as a rule, using the bell line, or a pouch sleeve which is snug at the wrist and enlarges midway between elbow and hand.

Shawl Collar Favored in Paris Coat Styles

The shawl collar is supreme in Paris winter coat styles. Nearly always it is worked out in fur, the favorites being baby lamb, beaver, ermine, dyed minkskin and fox.

The rich velvet coats often have shawl collars of expensive fox. Much ermine is combined with rough materials for sports and motor coats. The straight stand-up collar of fur has a slight vogue this season.

Army and Navy Breaking Down Red Tape Barriers

Rear Admiral Thomas P. Magruder (left), after being forgiven for his first attack on Navy system, has launched forth with another one, while Major General Charles P. Summerall (right) has been silenced in his criticism of Army barracks conditions.

(International News)

The Army and the Navy are bringing up their big guns, and a concerted bombardment on official red tape and official muzzling is getting under way.

Rear Admiral Thomas P. Magruder started the ball a-rolling. He came right out in public with a devastating criticism of Navy waste. He was forgiven by the administration and kept clear of a court-martial, and just when the incident was being forgotten, he burst forth with another and hotter arraignment.

This time Magruder, it seems, is almost certain to be subjected to a court-martial, which may result not only in an official reprimand, but in possibly more severe punishment.

Then there's the case of Major General Charles P. Summerall. Sent out West to investigate barracks conditions, he did his job thoroughly. Altogether too thoroughly to please certain politicians. Summerall charged that Army housing wasn't high-grade enough for cattle.

President Coolidge quickly called him back from his trip. And Summerall, being a good soldier, has stopped his broadside.

But indications are that the old gag rule in force in both service departments, preventing officers and men from speaking their minds, is going to be a thing of the past.

That 4-hour morning grind!
How do you prepare for it?

Between 8:30 and 12:30 the important work of the world is done—in offices, schools and homes. A breakfast that "stands by" you is a real need!

Workers who are keen, alert and energetic all through the morning have an immense advantage. Because nation-wide investigations among big business organizations (public utility plants, wholesale houses, and many others) show that 70% of the world's important work is compressed into the four morning hours.

To carry you through these top-speed, high-pressure hours, you must have a good, sustaining breakfast. A breakfast of balanced nourishment, to provide quickly-available, long-lasting energy.

Because it "stands by" you through the morning a breakfast of Mother's Oats makes a real difference in how you feel during your most important working period. Oatmeal provides energy and tissue-building materials in better proportion than any other cereal. It is rich in minerals, too—and vitamins—and tender bran, so valuable for roughage. For flavor, Quick Mother's Oats has been the choice of critical families for over fifty years. Skill in mill-making made the difference.

Start tomorrow to have Quick Mother's Oats breakfasts for a week. See how much longer your morning vigor is sustained!

Quick Mother's Oats

THERE'S a peculiar bug sweeping over the world today that has already sunk its teeth into millions.

Its name is Radio.

No one is immune. If it hasn't bitten you yet, your time will come. For some months you will lie absolutely helpless in its power. You may later recover from its effects sufficiently to go about your daily tasks and attend to your social duties, but you will never fully recover.

The experience is indescribably delightful and the pleasure never-ending—if—There's quite an "if" in radio.

We repeat, the pleasure is never-ending, if you get a good radio receiver and good accessories.

And you overcome the "if" by careful reading of radio advertising. Like everything else, good radio sets and accessories are the advertised ones. It doesn't pay to advertise the worthless.

Advertising will help you in radio as it helps you in selecting intrinsic value in everything else. You can rest assured that anything which is continuously advertised, whether it is a radio set or a can of asparagus, has stood the test.

Radio works best in the dark—but there's no need to buy in the dark.

Let the light of advertising show you the right

Phillips Carlin At Victory Ball

PHILLIPS CARLIN.

Phillips Carlin, WEAF announcer, who will be master of ceremonies at the American Legion Victory Ball in the Kingston Armory, November 11, says the foundation for his success in his musical and pleasing voice, it has won him many friends, some of whom he has never seen.

A certain young lady in a mid-western town was listening to the weekly broadcasting from one of the many stations on WEAF's chain not so long ago. She heard the rich voice of an announcer proclaiming the merits of the feature about to be heard. The voice attracted her and she immediately sat down and wrote to the announcer at the station to which she had been listening. Now she and Phillips Carlin are regular correspondents. She has never seen Phil, but the warm cordiality in his voice so interested her that she felt that she ought to know its owner. Phil has made many friends in just the same way. He has a facility for being perfectly at home no matter where he goes and his geniality is always contagious.

A short time ago, a prominent society hostess who resides near New York city sent for Mr. Carlin to speak to a group of friends who had gathered at her home for a weekly bridge party. Phil accepted and then set about preparation for the affair. No one knows from what source his material appeared, but before he had finished his little talk, nearly everyone present was weeping with laughter. Genuine, rich, hearty humor, Phillips Carlin is a master of both. He can talk to a group of engineers, society gatherings, political groups, or church convocations and his talk will never savour of the uninteresting. As he puts it, "I try to remember a little about everything for you meet about everything in the radio business and I keep it all in the back of my head for future reference."

This collection of stories is bound in one. There are the funny ones, the serious ones, the pathetic ones, the ones from his experiences in the studio. There are many humorous happenings in other business and the studio, many pathetic occurrences. Mr. Carlin has seen many of them, and with his own wit, is well prepared to tell of his experiences at the Victory Ball and hopes that he may have the pleasure of causing everyone present to enjoy a good laugh.

A. & P. Celebrates 68th Anniversary

Original Chain Store Enterprise Begun in 1859 in New York and Now Has Thousands of Stores.

As a fitting commemoration of the 68th anniversary of its founding, The Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Company is holding a nation-wide celebration. The company was founded in the year 1859 and has had a most remarkable growth in its 68 years of business life. Every store of this great chain is joining in the celebration of the founding of the business. According to the usual custom, the public has been asked to participate in the event and will, no doubt, do so in a way that affords many benefits. This participation is made possible by an expression of appreciation for the public's patronage and is typified by drastic reductions in retail food prices during the period of the anniversary celebration.

The Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Company are the acknowledged originators of the chain-store method of doing business. The company's founder, George Huntington Hartford, believed that the measure of his firm's business success could be entirely determined by the value his patrons received. With the idea in mind of making the consumer's dollar buy more, Mr. Hartford opened his first store on Vesey street, New York city, in the year 1859. In the company's first modest establishment, Mr. Hartford's idea took root and met the popular acclaim of Vesey street shoppers. The success of the first store prompted the opening of others, and year after year the firm expanded.

The Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Company's activities are world-wide in scope. Foreign buyers comb the food markets of the world seeking rare exotic foods for the palates of America. The domestic markets are patronized daily and selections of the choicest stock are sought to be offered in A&P stores. Fine foreign foods and popular domestic wares will be offered during the celebration period.

Lose by DecisionCourt of Appeals Affirms Decision Involving Investment Made by
New York Bankers in German Securities—Ulster County Had 118
Creditors.The court of appeals has handed down a decision by which unanimously they affirmed the decision of the appellate division of the Supreme court of the First Judicial Department—the city of New York which sustained the decision of Judge Clearwater in dismissing the complaint with costs in the action brought by Charles S. Martin against George W. Perkins, Jr., son of the late former member of J. P. Morgan & Company, his mother, sister and brother-in-law, and William C. Person, the former California financier, in the law suit involving $12,809, 000.This action, which was tried before Judge Clearwater, arose out of the failure of Kautz, Nacomi & Kuhn, the large international banking house. Among the creditors of the bankrupt firm were 118 residents of Ulster county. The evidence taken by the judge as referee filled eight large printed volumes.
The claim of the plaintiff was that the defendants by loaning the bankrupt firm two millions of dollars to tide them over their losses consequent upon investment in German securities, became the partners of the bankrupt firm. The case was tried before the judge in the city of New York and occupied from the 10th of May till the 4th day of July, 1924. He dismissed the complaint, writing an opinion in which he said that a partnership was not intended, and that none was created by or resulted from any of the loans or agreements executed by the defendants to the members of the bankrupt firm.This decision, as above stated, unanimously was sustained by the appellate division, and now unanimously by the court of appeals. The case was notable, not only because of the large amount involved, but the eminence of the lawyers who appeared.Among them were Rushmore, Bisbee & Stern; Charles P. Howland, of Senator Root's firm, for the plaintiff. For the various defendants appeared Hawkins, Delafield & Longfellow; Davies, Auerbach & Cornell; Curtis, Mallett-Prevost & Colt;
Austin G. Fox; Moore, Hall, Swan &
Cunningham; Albert de Roos;
George W. Elkins; ex-Judge Alfred
R. Page; Walter H. Pollak; John V. Van Cott; Maxwell C. Katz and Otto C. Sommerlich.The opinion of the court of appeals is lengthy, elaborate, was written by Judge Andrews and concurred in by Judges Cardozo, Pound, Crane, Lehman, Kellogg and O'Brien.HIGH WOODS.High Woods, Oct. 24.—Mrs. Win-

Financial and Commercial

New York, Oct. 24 (AP).—An over-extended short interest in many stocks was given a severe twist in today's stock market. When operators for the advance mastered their forces for a vigorous campaign, hopes of a good rally had been aroused by the market's indifference to over-Sunday news of an unfavorable character.

The included the transforming of large reserves of clearing house banks into a deficit of more than $12,000,000, shown in Saturday's report. Explicit details of the new Ford car, which is expected to furnish powerful competition to other automobile makers, meaning of a recovery for the Western Spenser Steel Company and a poor earnings report by Marland Oil likewise had little effect on today's recovery of prices.

Some liquidation of impaired margin accounts occurred at the outset, but various stocks were staunchly supported and the whole list began to rise in a spirit of fashion. Banks called some $15,000,000 in loans to strengthen their weakened reserve position, without a serious strain on the credit situation.

By early afternoon a profusion of 2 to 3 point advances was scattered through the list. United Drug and Sterling Products were up 1/2. International Harvester 5/8. Commercial Solvents, Baldwin and Houston Oil 5/8, and Case Threshing Machine, American Express and General Asphalt four each.

Quotations given by Parker McElroy & Co., members N. Y. Stock Exchange, 120 Broadway, New York city, branch office, 260 Fair street.

Find Rubber Tree Growing in His Yard
Orange, Texas.—The only rubber tree in Texas has been discovered here. The owner started to cut it down, but observed that it was of unusual type. Neighbors recalled that a late owner of the place set out the plant many years ago. The tree now is a foot in diameter and in a thriving condition.

Lorelei Lee
Ruth Lee Taylor, twenty-year-old actress, stepped into fame when she was made the choice for the title role in the film version of "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes." A two-month search was made for the proper blonde; hundreds of girls were given screen tests and thousands wrote letters of application. Miss Taylor was born in Grand Rapids, Mich., and she was educated in Portland, Ore.

SOMETHING TO THINK ABOUT

MENTAL SUNSHINE

THE title of this is stolen boldly and boldly from a tobacco advertisement, which is proof that it really pays to read the paid-for publicity, often the most useful as well as the most interesting part of our newspapers and periodicals.

Just what ordinary sunshine is we do not know.

We know that from it we get light and heat and that both are made up from vibrations in the ether and the atmosphere which separates the earth from the ether.

We know that a pane of glass will allow the passage through it of a maximum of the light and a minimum of the heat, and we know that a sheet of black iron will allow the passage of a maximum of the heat and a minimum of the light, but the cause of the vibrations and what makes the difference between the light and heat vibrations are among the many unsolved problems of science.

Mental sunshine offers us no such enigmas.

There is nothing through which the light of a smile will not penetrate.

There is nothing which will not show the effects of a warm hand-clasp.

There is no sun among all the billions of the heaven's luminaries that will reach into the depths of sorrow but mental sunshine will lighten those dark places and warm the coldness of a soul.

All that we see in this world is made visible by reflected light. The green of the fields, the blue of our sweetheart's eyes, all color and all form are visible to us only by the light which reflected from them and shining upon our retinas is telegraphed by our optic nerves to the opposite side of our brains. The reason we cannot see objects in the dark is because they reflect no light.

The man who cannot and does not reflect mental sunshine is living in the dark, a lonesome and pitiable creature.

We cannot cultivate sunshine in the heavens, but we can encourage it in ourselves. We strive and deny ourselves for money. We make little or no effort to increase our mental sunshine. Yet money without happiness is an empty and useless thing, while happiness without money is a wealth we can spend unceasingly and never lessen the supply.

What do you say to spending five minutes a day letting our mental sun radiate its light and warmth on whoever and whatever is within its radius? If we begin with the five minutes it will shortly shine all through the 24 hours.

Flute Players Never Popular as Neighbors

Flute playing appears to have gone out of fashion and it has been suggested that this is because of the denunciation that the instrument has received from the pens of eminent writers. Violinists and pianists sometimes figure in fiction as heroes and heroines, but performers upon the flute are generally introduced into novels only as comic or unpleasant characters, says the Philadelphia Inquirer.

At least three comic characters of fiction were flute players: Dick Swiveller, who took to it as a "good, sound, dismal occupation," and was consequently requested to remove himself to another lodging; Mr. Mell, the schoolmaster, who "made the most dismal sounds I ever heard produced by any means, natural or artificial," and the young gentleman at Mrs. Tolders' musical party who "blew his melancholy into the flute."

Eulwer-Lytton wrote of a clever schoolboy who "unluckily took to the flute and unfitted himself for the present century," and Charlotte Bronte represents "imperfect curates" as performing upon it. Then there was also Goethe, who summed up the case against the flute thus: "There is scarcely a more melancholy suffering to be undergone than what is forced upon us by the neighborhood of an inept player on the flute."

Age-Old Difference Over Welsh Emblem

The custom of wearing the leek by Welshmen on St. David's day has been variously accounted for. In the "Festa Anglo-Romana" we are told that it is worn in memory of a great victory obtained by the ancient Britons, who lived in the Welsh region, over the Saxons, they, during the battle, having leeks in their hats for their military colors and distinction of themselves.

Other accounts say that when fighting under their King Cadwalla on a field near Hethfield (or Hatfield Chase) in 633 A. D., in which that vegetable was growing, they won another victory and in jubilation they uprooted the leeks, stuck them in their hats and then returned home.

The custom has certainly remained since that date, as can be seen at any international sporting gathering with which Wales is concerned. The tradition is largely superseding the leek in favor as the Welsh emblem.

The Button in History

The button is a product of modern civilization, since the ancient people did not have any such form of holding their clothes together. They were first used for ornamental purposes. The next step was the use of the button and loop, the buttonhole being last in the development. Buttons were first employed in southern Europe in the Thirteenth and Fourteenth centuries. Their manufacture in England did not commence until the reign of Elizabeth. The earliest mention of the buttonhole in literature occurs in the year 1591. While men's outer garments are still made with buttons and buttonholes, the trend of the present is away from such fastenings. Almost all women's clothes and many men's undergarments are now made without buttons.

Changing a Mule's Mind

Gen. William Booth, founder of the Salvation Army, used to tell a story of a man in South Africa who was exceedingly successful in dealing with mule teams. Asked how he managed these stubborn creatures, he said:

"Well, when they stop and won't go on, I just pick up a handful of gravel or soil, put it to their mouths and let them taste it. Of course they spit it out again; but as a rule they begin to go on."

"Why do you think it has that effect on them?" persisted his questioner.

"Well, I don't know," was the reply, "but I expect it changes the current of their thoughts."

Kept the Minutes

The village football club was being reorganized. The vice was appointed president, and a person of particularly voracious countenance was proposed as secretary.

"You know how to take the minutes, of course, James?" asked the parson. The secretary grinned.

"Yes, I know," he replied.

At the next meeting the president announced that the secretary would read the minutes of the previous meeting. The secretary produced his notebook and stood up.

"The meeting lasted twenty-five minutes," he said, brightly.—London Tit-Bits.

Schutt-Metcalf

The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Charles C. Ellis, pastor of the Rondont Presbyterian Church. The bride, who was very lovely in her gown of white satin, en train, wearing a tulle veil with lace cap effect and carrying a shower bouquet of white roses and swansea, was given in marriage by her brother, William H. Meisinger and Miss Jessie Cowley were the bridesmaids and were dressed in yellow tulle. They carried yellow chrysanthemums and more picture hats. Walter H. Gill, cousin of the groom, was his best man and the ushers were Robert Denhardt and Harold D. McCall, brother of the bride. During the ceremony Miss Cowley sang as a solo, "Hawking," and the Misses Cowley and Meisinger sang "I Love You Truly," accompanied at the piano by Mrs. Harry G. Smith, who also played the wedding music. Candle light throughout the home tied with the October sunset in adding to the picturesqueness of the scene. Following the ceremony and congratulations a collation was served. The bridal table decorated with roses was also set with a tea set of china that was the first tea set owned by the groom's grandmother when she "set up housekeeping." The bride has been for four years a member of the Society of the Sacred Heart High School, and her associates on the faculty were guests at the wedding. The groom is the industrial engineer of the Central Hudson Gas and Electric Corporation of Kingston, and the true wish of both young people was attained by the many beautiful and valued gifts received from many friends. Mr. and Mrs. Schutt left for New York, sailing from there for a month's trip to Bermuda. On their return they will reside in a newly erected home on Mountain View avenue, this city. ### CROWDS VISIT BIER OF CARDINAL O'DONNELL Carlingford, Ireland, Oct. 24 (AP).—All business was suspended today in Carlingford when the body of Patrick Cardinal O'Donnell, primate of Ireland, who died Saturday, left for Armagh, the seat of his diocese. A heavy rain was falling.

Vast throngs visited the bedside of the dead cardinal yesterday until the Sisters of Mercy began a night-long vigil last night. The public was again admitted early this morning and later a requiem Mass was celebrated in St. Michael's Church.

An umbrella made with a window in it has been invented. This is very handy, as it enables the user to see if the owner is approaching.
